Trade at Home Bargains Offered by Merchants

Local business people and merchants are this week offering people of the beach section and Point Loma some worthwhile bargains in an effort to make our citizens realize it pays to trade at home. Look up the advertisements on the last page of this issue and take advantage of the merchandise offered there. You will find every word of the "trade at home" talk to be true.

It does not pay to drive five or ten miles and return, to buy a pound of butter for 37c, when you can get the same article here for the same price or possibly 38c; and many other items in the same proportion. Then, too, the more trading at home you do, enables your local stores to carry larger stock and a more varied assortment which will grow as home buying grows, and you will find that by buying at home and building your own community stores you will be building values for yourself.

Buy from your local merchant, he is one of your best friends and deserves your patronage.

PIANO TECHNICIAN OF EXPERIENCE LOCATES HERE

R. S. Bradway, formerly of New Orleans, La., last week located in Ocean Beach and will serve San Diego as a very proficient and experienced pipe organ and piano technician.

Mr. Bradway has spent many years of his life working for and with the better piano manufacturers of our country. He is said to have learned the business with the Kimball pipe organ factory at Chicago and the Knabe factory at Baltimore, Md. He is also a musical student and artist of some ability.

For piano tuning and other services in this line look up Bradway's adv., in our classified column.

FUNERAL FOR MRS. E. O. THAYER HELD SATURDAY

Mrs. Clara A. Thayer, beloved wife of Rev. Edward O. Thayer, 4548 Bermuda avenue, passed away at her home in Ocean Beach, January 25, age 84 years. Funeral services were held Saturday, January 26, at Bonham Bros., Rev. James Hughes officiating.

The Thayers have been residents of this section for about eight years, coming to California 22 years ago, from Barre, Vermont, where Dr. Thayer was a member of the Barre M. E. conference.

Besides the husband left to mourn her loss are two daughters, Mrs. Frances T. Neill of Ocean Beach and Eleanor W. Thayer of Phoenix, Ariz.

VARIED PROGRAM AT KIWANIS WEDNESDAY NOON

James Hughes was chairman of the day's program at Wednesday Kiwanis luncheon. Dr. F. R. Felt enumerated several projects for an achievement program, the one receiving the greater attention being the proposal to establish a local town forum which it is hoped to promote under federal direction and hold weekly or semi-monthly meetings. Dad Bingham as a guest gave several short readings in his original and entertaining way. A reel of Goodwill Industries pictures were shown by Myron Insko, bringing that worthwhile organization directly into the view of a number of the members who have never visited this splendid charitable organization which now has been in operation in San Diego for five years, making good headway and now offering work to about three dozen people in its plant every day.

Chester Clark of Iowa was a guest of Myron Insko and George Stephan of La Jolla was a visiting Kiwanian.

JACK LATHAM MANAGING ATLANTIC DRUG STORE

Jack Latham on Monday accepted a position as manager of the Atlantic Drug Store at 3559 Atlantic street, next door to the new Piggly-Wiggly store just beyond the Marine base.

Jack has many friends in Ocean Beach who will likely stop in and say "Howdy" and try one of his malted milks, while chatting about school days at Point Loma high, where he was one of the pioneer pupils of that institution in its early days. He has been a resident here for more than ten years.

Look up the adv. of this new business elsewhere in this issue of the Ocean Beach News. It might be handy to pick up your requirements there some time when passing.

OPENS CAFE AT 2244 BACON STREET

W. B. Moore of San Diego the first of the week opened the Night Owl cafe at 2244 Bacon St., which for a time was known also as Robb's Cafe.

The new proprietor for several years was located as a partner in the Lobby Buffet at 820 Broadway, San Diego. He will specialize in short orders and sandwiches.

PRINCE AND PRINCESS VISIT AN UNCLE HERE

Recently the little beach home of Miss Dolph on Saratoga Ave., was the scene of a most happy reunion, when Prince Rospigliosi motored south with the Princess to visit his Uncle John Rowan Reid whom he has not seen since he was a lad in Rome.

These delightful young people flew from New York for this their first visit to the west coast and plan to make further trips here before returning east.

Permits For Fishing Pier to be Sought of State and Government

According to reports received of the city council session Tuesday in which the directors of Ocean Beach chamber of commerce appeared and requested action on a fishing pier project, it is apparent that action will be delayed, perhaps for many months, the council finally instructing the city manager to apply to the State for a permit to construct a pier at Ocean Beach and to make application to the war department for permission to extend the pier into the ocean.

Councilman Bennett, who during the past few months has been sponsoring the buying of Crystal pier at Pacific Beach, stated it would take a year's time to make preliminary arrangement; and apparently if left for his initiative would take longer and perhaps never become a reality, though he is councilman from our district. He became an expert on fishing grounds of the beach section during the consideration and said the ocean was too shallow close in, and a great deal over $16,000, estimated by the city engineer last year, would be necessary for a pier in this section. Previously this councilman and others, had made the plea no money was available when $15,000 was previously asked for a pier, now, City Attorney Byers is reported to have claimed there was fund of $39,000 available.

The San Diego dailies have contended the fishing pier project was a contest between Pacific Beach and Ocean Beach, however, this is not the case. Pacific Beach has its pier and our citizens believe that having been on record for several years with plans and petitions for a pier at this point, it is thought the duty of the council to give Ocean Beach first consideration.

Joe E. Brennan, port director of San Diego, two years ago was against building piers into the ocean, but is understood to have said this week that he now favors these projects as an inducement to tourists and to hold our own people from traveling north to where they find this accommodation, for recreation.

Frank B. McElwee as spokesman for the Ocean Beach delegation to the council said substantially as follows:

"First I want it understood that we are not fighting Pacific Beach on the location of a fishing pier.

"There is already a pier at Pacific Beach. It makes no difference whether the city of San Diego buys it or not. The pier will stay there just the same.

"The question is whether we should buy a pier already built, or whether we should build another pier at another location.

"We have figures from the City Engineer's office showing that a fishing pier can be built at the foot of Del Monte Ave., Ocean Beach, for $16,000, which is less than one-half the amount that you are asked to pay private interest for the Pacific Beach pier.

"In comparing the piers, we find that the Crystal Pier at Pacific Beach is approximately 900 feet long and depth of water at end of pier is 11 1/2 feet. The proposed pier at Ocean Beach, according to the city engineer's plans, would be 1200 feet long and depth of water at end 15 1/2 feet. This makes the Ocean Beach pier 300 feet longer and water at end 4 feet deeper.

"We contend that it would be necessary to extend the Crystal Pier at least 300 feet before it would be safe for landing boats or, suitable for fishing. So even if you bought or contracted to buy Crystal Pier, it would be necessary to immediately spend several thousand dollars more in extending it before it would be of any use to the public.

"I wish to also call your attention to the fact that if Crystal Pier is bought or contracted for by the city, it will go off the tax rolls. From the records at the Assessor's office we find that these taxes will amount to approximately $850.00 per year. This sum alone would more than pay the interest on the total amount that it will cost to build the pier at Ocean Beach.

"This alone should be reason enough for not buying Crystal Pier. Why not let private parties continue to own the pier, and use the taxes paid by them to finance another pier at what is conceded by most fishermen to be the best location in South California for a fishing pier, off the rocks at Ocean Beach has for years been considered the best fishing around San Diego. In addition it is in a community of 6000 people, and is nearer by several miles to the thickly populated section of San Diego, and is within the 25c round trip or $1.25 weekly pass zone.

"We petitioned the Council last June to build a fishing pier at Ocean Beach, at which time we were assured of help from the SERA, provided the City bought most of the material. We were put off from week to week by the council and at last were informed that there was no money available for this purpose.

Now we are told by the press that you have ordered the City Attorney to draw up a contract to buy the Crystal Pier at $35,000.00, making a $10,000.00 down payment. What the people of Ocean Beach and I might say other citizens of San Diego who have signed the petition for a pier at Ocean Beach, at the foot of Del Monte avenue, can't understand is why it is possible to raise $10,000 cash now to pay the U. S. National bank and one of the building and loan companies as a down payment for a pier, at a figure more than twice what our City Engineer says a new and longer fishing pier can be built at Ocean Beach.

"Can it be that they have a white elephant that they wish to unload on the taxpayers of San Diego. They loaned their money on that property, and had to take it over. Why should we taxpayers of San Diego be the goat? Why all this secrecy? The pier is closed to the public. If it is such a good buy, why is it necessary to keep a watchman there with instructions to allow no one to inspect the pier. If we taxpayers are going to buy the pier, shouldn't we be allowed first to inspect it.

"Another very strong reason for building a new pier instead of buying one already built, is that in building a new pier the money would all be spent for labor and material in San Diego, which is in line with the Federal Government's recovery program. If you buy a pier already built, all the money would go into the vaults of a bank and building and loan association; at least most of it would; not one cent of it would be spent for labor or material."

HUGE FORD PROJECT FOR EXPOSITION

The Ford Motor Co., will stage a huge industrial and educational exhibit at San Diego in connection with the California Pacific International Exposition, it was announced late last week in Dearborn, Mich.

The Ford exhibition will be spread over a wide acreage in Balboa park. The exhibit will be housed in a permanent building, construction of which will start in two weeks.

Nearby, at one side of the main building, will be an amphitheatre, seating 3000, where concerts and other attractions will be staged.

As visitors are expected from many countries, roads characteristic of those countries over which visitors travel to the fair will be built along the canyon terraces behind the Ford building.

The Ford exhibit at San Diego is to be highly educational along industrial, agricultural and transportation lines, and there are millions of persons out West who will welcome the opportunity to see such a display at San Diego.

GERMANS WIN SAAR PLEBISCITE—
AMELIA EARHART SPANS
PACIFIC OCEAN.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

GERMANY won an overwhelming victory in the plebiscite held to determine the wishes of the inhabitants of the rich Saar basin as to the future status of that territory. The complete vote as announced by the commission was: for return to Germany 477,119, for annexation to France 2,124, and to return to present status under League of Nations control 46,513. Their margin of victory exceeded the hopes of even the most optimistic Nazi leaders.

Opposition forces, terrorized by fear of reprisals, immediately prepared to leave the Saar as soon as departure of foreign troops removes assurance of protection. It has been estimated that more than 400 Jews left their homes within the first two days after the election, some of them preparing to locate in Luxembourg, and others leaving for Palestine.

The council still has the final decision on how the Saar shall be governed, and if the minority is larger than 40 per cent, it may yet divide the Saar, returning only those districts which went overwhelmingly pro-Nazi to the reich, and permitting the others to remain, as now, under the league.

There were few disturbances at the polls as voting proceeded quietly. Rioting, however, broke out while ballot boxes containing the votes were being brought by soldiers of the League of Nations International army to Wartburg palace to be counted.

Love of the fatherland won over antipathy to Hitler principles in influencing the voters. The Saarlanders in voting to return to reich rule exchange their personal and political liberties for the regimentation of a dictatorship with its curb on the press, free speech and individualism.

The plebiscite was conducted under the direction of Geoffrey Knox, appointed president by the League of Nations to administer the affairs of the turbulent region while the vote was being taken.

Repercussions of events which will immediately follow the Saar vote are awaited with uneasiness in world capitals. A spokesman for the Italian government expressed hope that transfer of the territory to Germany would take place immediately. Fears were also expressed that exuberance over the victorious vote would lead Nazi supporters to excesses elsewhere. Signs of a renewal of Nazi activity in Austria are being watched closely by Italy.

EXTENSION of life of the Reconstruction Finance corporation for two years will be asked, informed congressmen assert. The RFC's authority to make loans expires on January 31. It is rumored that the extension will include a proviso permitting the President to put the organization out of business by proclaiming the emergency ended at the conclusion of one year.

The extension plan may also carry a section doubling the length of time for maturity of loans the RFC may make. The present limit is five years. It is also said that the RFC may be permitted to extend instead of renew existing loans providing value of security is unchanged.

A NUMBER of important issues await the League of Nations as it convenes at Geneva on its fifteenth birthday. Five major disputes will come before the body, of which the Saar plebiscite, involving as it does the disposition of the future national allegiance of that rich territory, holds most immediate interest.

Other decisions which await action of the league include: the dispute between Iraq and Persia over alleged border violations by the latter; the border conflict between Italy and Ethiopia; the Greek complaint that Greek minorities in Albania are being deprived of their guaranteed rights; and the long war in the Chaco Boreal between Bolivia and Paraguay. The latter nation has been cool toward the assembly's detailed peace plan, although it has been accepted by Bolivia.

FIRST legislation to be put through the house of representatives was completed as the $779,916,000 independent offices appropriation bill was passed in virtually the same form as recommended by the appropriations committee. The amount for the securities and exchange commission was increased to $2,000,000. Efforts of Representative Blanton of Texas to reduce the $264,043 for the home loan bank board and of Representative Taber, New York, to cut down the appropriation for the federal communications commission were defeated.

Signs of gathering storms were seen, however, as Representative Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, chairman of the house interstate commerce committee, declared on the floor that he would not support a bill to place production of oil under government control. Emergency legislation to supplant control measures invalidated by the recent decision of the United States Supreme court will undoubtedly be proposed, and Rayburn's declaration is seen as an indication that opposition may develop.

SWEDEN, apparently, has found a way to beat the depression. King George in his annual message to parliament, reported that solution of the problem of unemployment appears near, the budget is balanced without new taxes having been imposed or new loans floated, and the national debt will be reduced this year. Only 60,000,000 kroner (about $15,000,000) has been asked for unemployment relief, as compared to 160,000,000 kroner last year.

IMPROVED conditions among corn belt farmers are indicated by a federal report which shows a gain of $82,989,592, or more than 30 cents a bushel for each grower, has been realized by farmers in 10 states who availed themselves of the government 45-cent corn loans. Only slightly more than $500,000 of the $120,492,259 remains unpaid. About 18,000,000 bushels are under seal under the new 55-cent price, report states.

SENATOR HUEY P. LONG, after attacking the administration on the floor of the senate, betook himself to the radio and continued the assault. He declared the Roosevelt policies were hopeless, and summoned all the people to flock to his banner and help wipe out all fortunes above three or four millions, "making every man a king."

Meantime the revolt against the kingfish in Louisiana was growing. Citizens by the hundreds were joining the Square Deal association which is pledged to march on the capitol in Baton Rouge unless the legislature repeals certain of Huey's dictatorial laws.

SLIM, rouse-headed Amelia Earhart Putnam, holder of a dozen air records, has added to her laurels by making the dangerous west to east Pacific hop. Thousands cheered the intrepid flier as she brought her big plane to a swift stop at Oakland after the 2,400 miles flight from Honolulu.

She was the first person to make the trip alone. Miss Putnam admitted weariness after she flew her mud-spattered ship to Los Angeles, home of her mother. Unfavorable weather prevented her from continuing to Washington as she had originally planned.

The solo flight from Honolulu thrilled even hard-riding airmen. Miss Earhart, however, took it calmly. Her latest accomplishment adds another record to her already amazing list of "firsts" which include:

First woman to fly the Atlantic.
First woman to fly solo across the Atlantic.
First person to fly the Atlantic twice.
First woman to fly an autogyro.
First person to cross the United States in an autogyro.

First woman to receive the distinguished flying cross.
First woman to receive the National Geographic society's gold medal.
First woman to make a transcontinental nonstop flight.

Holder of women's transcontinental speed record: 17:07:30.
Former holder of women's international speed record—181.18 m. p. h.

First woman licensed in the United States to carry passengers for hire in cabin planes weighing up to 7,700 pounds.

IN THE highly dramatized trial of Bruno Hauptmann for the kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh baby the state continued to weave a strong net of circumstantial evidence around the defendant. Lindbergh first identified his voice as that of the man who received the ransom; next was Amanda Hochmuth, eighty-seven-year-old man who told of seeing Hauptmann driving a "dirty-green" car with a ladder in it into the Lindbergh lane March 1, 1932, the day of the kidnapping. Then John Perrone, Bronx taxi driver, identified him as the man who paid him $1 to deliver a ransom note to "Jasie."

"Jasie," otherwise Dr. John Condon, the aged Bronx educator who undertook the negotiations with the kidnaper, next went on the stand and in his garrulous way identified Bruno as the man with whom he dealt and to whom he handed the $50,000 ransom money. His long and somewhat rambling story was bitterly assailed in cross examination by E. J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, but seemingly the great value of his evidence was not much shaken.

Handwriting experts introduced by the prosecution added to the drama when they testified that in their opinion Hauptmann was the author of all the ransom notes. Comparisons of the notes and subsequent handwriting, admittedly Hauptmann's, were shown, and observers conceded the state had produced strong evidence against the accused.

Detective Arthur Johnson of New York was on his way home from Europe bringing relatives of the late Isidore Fisch to testify for the state. Hauptmann claimed in his defense that the ransom money found in his possession was given to him by Fisch, a business associate in New York. Fisch later returned to his home in Germany, where he died.

AN APOLOGY to the Canadian government and payments of $50,000.50 damages is the penalty imposed on the United States for sinking the rum running schooner I'm Alone in the Gulf of Mexico in March of 1932. This decision was announced by Willis Van Devanter, associate justice of the United States Supreme court, and Sir Lyman Duff, chief justice of Canada, who were the commissioners of arbitration under the ship liquor treaty of 1924 between the United States and Great Britain for controlling liquor smuggling.

Of the damages awarded, $25,000 is to be paid as compensation to the Canadian government and $25,000.50 to the master and members of the crew of the I'm Alone or their families. Included in the latter is $10,185 to the widow and children of Leon Mainguy, a French citizen of St. Pierre, Miquelon, who drowned when the schooner was sunk by the coast guard.

The commissioners found that the master and members of the crew were not parties to a liquor smuggling conspiracy.

THOSE Democrats and Republicans, eminent and otherwise, who are banded together as the American Liberty league are now really getting into action against what they deem the radical features of the administration's program, and their executive council has put out a ten-point platform. It declares the league's opposition to such practices as sweeping delegations of legislative authority to the President, lump sum appropriations to be doled out by the White House, socialization of industry and regimentation of American life.

In the first plank of its platform the league pledged itself to "preserve American institutions which safeguard to citizens in all walks of life the right to liberty and pursuit of happiness" and at the same time "to combat the growth of bureaucracy, the spread of monopoly, the socialization of industry, and the regimentation of American life."

Invasion of the law making and law interpreting functions by New Deal administrators was also rapped by the league in promising "to uphold the American principle that laws be made only by the direct representatives of the people in the congress, and that the laws be interpreted only by the courts."

Other points in the 10-point declaration of policy pledged the league to fight for government economy.

HAVING given the New Deal a slight swat by holding the petroleum control feature of the NIRA unconstitutional, the Supreme court moved rapidly toward a judgment as to the legality of the abrogation of gold payments. Several cases challenging this act were lumped and oral arguments were heard. This being a matter of vast importance, involving $100,000,000,000, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings himself appeared to present the case for the government. Mr. Cummings is an excellent lawyer, but not much can be said in praise of the legal abilities of most of the men whom the exigencies of politics have shoved into his office in Washington. So probably he was wise to handle this matter himself.

Cummings defended the constitutional authority of the President and congress to adopt the present monetary policy as inherently the right of the government to preserve itself. In an argument distinguished for oratorical display as well as for its legal aspects, Cummings said an adverse decision by the court would:

1. Increase the public and private debt of the nation by $69,000,000,000.
2. Create a special class that would be beyond the pale of the general financial structure, a class composed of those holding bonds demanding payment in gold.
3. Reduce the balance in the United States treasury $2,500,000,000.
4. Add $17,000,000,000 to the public debt and increase the interest charge on this debt alone by $2,500,000,000 a year.

The latter sum alone, Cummings said, is equal to twice the value of the 1934 wheat and cotton crop.

The attorney general referred to the troubled state of the country in the spring of 1933 and added: "I contend and shall show that the congress and the President of the United States acted reasonably in a period of very great difficulties and that their acts were not the product of caprice."

From the questions asked by the justices, observers gained the impression that there was a sharp division of opinion among them.

MARY PICKFORD went before Judge Ben Lindsey in Los Angeles and obtained a decree of divorce from Douglas Fairbanks; and thus came to an end the union of the "royal couple" of moviedom, who for ten years were regarded as the model wedded pair so far as happiness and worldly success went.

Mary's suit, filed more than a year ago, charged Doug with mental cruelty, indifference and neglect. She told Judge Lindsey the charges were true and that a fair and just property settlement had been made; and after Elizabeth Lewis, Miss Pickford's secretary, had testified the decree was granted and Mary left the courtroom almost in tears.

Fairbanks, in St. Moritz, Switzerland was informed of the divorce but declined to comment.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

Mystery of the Old Carpet Bag

ONE hundred thousand dollars in gold, packed in iron boxes, and these in turn placed in a safe with a Chubb lock, was stolen during the trip from Folkestone to Boulogne.

That is to say, the gold was in the safe when it left the office of the express company and it was not there when it reached its destination.

To add to the mystification there were only three keys to the safe and the whereabouts of each one was known.

The traffic superintendent in London had one; the head of the Folkestone railway had another, and the captain of the Folkestone-Boulogne boat had the third.

The outside of the safe gave some evidence of having been tampered with, but the iron boxes, instead of holding gold dust, were filled with small shot.

When had the gold been stolen? Where had the change been made from the gold to the shot?

Who could have been guilty of this audacious robbery? These were the three questions which troubled the police of two countries.

It was annoying, irritating and all of the other things in the calendar.

The boats running between the two ports were carefully searched. The waiting rooms at both ends of the line were subjected to a keen scrutiny, and altogether the detectives used up all of the tricks of the trade in trying to find a clue to this astonishing theft.

Finally they found an article that cast a ray of light on the case.

It was in the form of an old carpet bag which was located in the station at Folkestone.

The ownership of the bag was traced to a man named Peter Agar.

That in itself meant nothing. The great big fact was that the photograph of Peter Agar occupied a place of honor in the Rogues gallery at Scotland Yard.

Numerous copies of this photograph were made and were shown to conductors, sailors, storekeepers and others, and as a result of this it was pretty well proved that Peter Agar had been seen loitering in the vicinity of the Folkestone-Boulogne boat on the day the money disappeared.

But if he were guilty of the theft how could he have gotten the money from the locked safe?

In the meantime the police started to look for Peter.

It might have taken them a long while to locate him if Peter had not been conveniently arrested for forging checks.

The detectives visited him in jail and asked him to tell what he knew of the robbery of the safe with the gold dust.

He was quite indignant at this, and intimated that he considered it highly unprofessional to ask a man if he is a safe robber when he is already serving time as a check forger.

In a word, he declined to give the authorities any information.

One morning a woman named Mrs. Kay called at Scotland Yard, and told without any preliminaries told the amazed officials that the gold-dust robbery had been committed by Agar, John Pierce and Charles Tester. Tester was employed in the traffic department at London bridge.

They asked her what motive she had in "squealing."

She answered in one word: "Revenge."

It seems that when Agar went to jail on the forgery charges he left $45,000 with Pierce to support Mrs. Kay, who was his "dear friend." Pierce sent her money once or twice and then ceased payment altogether.

It was evident that he intended to cheat her.

She was furious and a furious woman is dangerous.

The state of affairs was explained to Agar and he told the whole story. Agar and Pierce had conceived the scheme of robbing the safe, but in order to do so it was necessary to get the assistance of some one connected with the railway.

They took Tester into partnership, and the first move came when Pierce visited the Folkestone office with a handful of wax and secured an impression of the key of the safe. After that it was simply a matter of arranging the details.

They arranged to meet the messenger with the safe at a certain point in the journey.

Agar carried the old carpet bag filled with shot and this was quickly substituted for the gold dust.

The loot was divided into three equal parts and the mystery might never have been solved if it had not been for the old carpet bag.

World's Biggest Book

The world's biggest book is in the British museum. It is a gazetteer and atlas of the world printed in Amsterdam in 1556, and is six feet high, four feet wide, and six inches thick. It has a wall space to itself, and students have to consult it as it stands in the position. The British museum also has some of the world's smallest books. Some are slightly smaller in size than a postage stamp. There was a great vogue for these tiny books a century back, and they were carried in the waistcoat pocket.

Brave Men of "The Banks"

Fishers Who Gather the Harvests of the Deep Seas
Constantly Face Grim Peril as Merely an

America's oldest industry brought its case to Washington. The Gloucester schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud, with nearly two score New England sea captains aboard, sailed up the Potomac recently to call attention to the plight of the nation's deep-sea fishermen, and to present a plea for a tariff which they believe would enable them to compete with Japanese and Canadian fisheries.

"The modern Grand Banks fishing schooner, of which the Gertrude L. Thebaud is the first to visit the Capital, is perhaps the handsomest commercial sailing craft afloat," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "These sturdy vessels are built of wood and range from 100 to 150 feet in length, with a tonnage of from 80 to 175 tons. Their lines are designed for speed, but they are remarkably adapted to the stormy seas that rage off the Grand Banks each winter during the fishing season."

"Well-ballasted and drawing a lot of water, the Bank schooner stands up to a great spread of sail; the main-boom in some vessels being 75 feet long. The big mainsail is one of the largest pieces of canvas carried on a fisherman, and the whole strength and skill of twenty to twenty-five men is required to make it fast in a strong breeze.

"The orthodox Bank schooner is two-masted—there have been three masted—and the sails carried are mainsail, foresail, forestaysail (or 'jumbo') and jib.

"Every Bank fishing schooner is a sort of seafaring democracy. In some craft the crew are shipped on the share system, their pay consisting of an equal share of the proceeds of the catch after the bills for food, ice, salt, bait, cook's wages, and other expenses are paid.

"The schooner's owner takes a quarter or a fifth of the gross stock, and this repays him for the hire of the vessel. Out of this share comes the cost of insurance and upkeep, but in good seasons, prior to 1914, many schooners paid their cost of construction within a year.

"The steam trawler, so generally used in European waters, has not been found as practical, fast-sailing or seaworthy on the Newfoundland Banks as the sailing schooner. In North American waters the greater part of the fishing is done from small boats known as dories, which are carried in 'nests' upon the schooner's deck, and launched upon reaching the fishing grounds.

"It is this dory fishing which makes the American fisherman (and in that term is included the Canadian and Newfoundlander) a distinct type from fishermen in other countries, and adds to his vocation a hazard and labor which call for sterling qualities.

"The passage to the Banks from New England ports may be a run of from 100 miles to 500 miles, and it is usually made in the quickest possible time. When the vessel has run her distance, the 'spot' the skipper has been making for is determined by the lead. The sounding lead is the fishing skipper's under-water 'eye,' and from the sample of the bottom brought up by the soap or tallow on the lead, and the depth of water, most skippers know their exact position after two casts.

"If the gear has been baited and the weather is favorable, the skipper sings out 'dories over!' Oars, pen-boards, bailer, water-jar, bait knife, gurdy-winch, bucket, gaff, sail and mast, and other boat and fishing gear are placed in each little craft—not much larger than a pleasure-park rowboat—and in turn they are swung overboard.

"In the dories, when the schooner has let them go, one fisherman rows while the other drops lines over the side. An iron anchor carries one end of the line to the bottom while buoy-keg, marked by a flag or 'black ball,' indicates its position to the fishermen. Three or four baited lines with as many as 90 hooks on a line may be joined together in a row, with an anchor-buoy line made fast to each end.

"The lines may be 'set' for periods from 30 minutes to half a day. The picking up of these tiny buoys and flags, scattered over five or six miles of ocean, is quite a trick, and fishing skippers seem to possess an uncanny sense of location in finding them.

"First the anchor and buoy are brought into the boat. Then the fishermen haul the baited line in slowly, disengaging the caught fish by a dexterous twist of the arm. Fish which cannot be cleared in this manner are passed to the other fishermen in the dory, who twist the hook out by means of a 'gob stick' which they thrust into the mouth of the fish. Unmarketable fish are knocked off into the sea by a vicious slat against the dory gunwales.

"When the last lines have been hauled in, the dory is rowed or sailed down to the schooner, which is generally hovering around like a hen keeping guard over her chickens.

"In summer, fog is the fishermen's worst enemy. Dories may be strung out when it is fine and clear, and before they can be picked up again they are blanketed in a wet, sight-defying mist. But there are not many casualties. Dories are usually picked up by other schooners, or else rowed in from the Banks to the land. Some of the distances stray fishermen have rowed in dories seem incredible, but a pull of 150 to 175 miles in rough weather and without food has been done."

Real Amateur Music

What peasants of Transylvania declare was the greatest musical festival ever held in that part of the world was recently brought to a conclusion at the little village of Ret. Sixteen bands competed. Many of the instruments had been made by the players and most of the musicians played by ear. The judges reported that it was difficult to pick winners because of the general high quality of the offerings. The third prize was won by a band of youths whose leader and first violin was fifteen years old. More than 3,000 peasants attended, many traveling miles for the event. When gypsy bands were hit by the depression and vanished, villagers of Ret carved violins, clarinets and other instruments out of wood from the forest and learned to play. Other villagers took up the idea.

A Doctor Knows!

And doctors use
a liquid laxative

There's a very good reason why doctors and hospitals have always used liquid laxatives! You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. It's the ideal family laxative because it's a family doctor's prescription, and perfectly safe and effective for family use.

If you are seeking something that will relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. Give regulated doses until Nature restores regularity.

Two Scrub Woods Valuable

Wood from two scrubs of the forest, hornbeam and serviceberry, has properties which rank them with the best. These trees, however, seldom attain large size. Serviceberry grows tall and straight, from which long, smooth poles can be cut. These will render long service for fence bars, wagon tongues and ranches, hay poles, clothesline poles, in fact, on any job where a strong stiff stick is needed.

All-Important Little Dinner Hats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

its attractive exterior conceals within its depths pockets for your vanity case, your "hanky" and your purse.

The hat and muff pictured are fashioned of brown velvet with bandings of gold sequins. The little veil is stiffened just enough to impart sprightliness. Muff and hat sets of this type made up of mulline and flowers are ideal for bridesmaid wear.

The toque sketched in the upper left-hand corner is styled of taffeta and mulline. Order it in black or any color of your choice. The scalloped edge about the large circular mulline veil is a new feature this season. This model in sweet pea colorings makes a ravishing headpiece for the bride's attendants.

Sketched immediately below is the new wrap-around turban, a type which is very smart for the matron. Erect folds of mulline spiral around and around like a winding staircase to the very pinnacle of the crown. A banding of jet sequins encircles the head-line.

A youthful off-the-face hat is next shown. The mulline shape has a molded turn-back cuff with a flange of mulline on the crown to give it height. Recurring folds of taffeta with tiny bows of the same form the trimming.

The picturesquely veiled hat in the lower left corner features the very smart Marina coronet, the same formed of intricately braided folds of black velvet. The veil is a huge circle with a cut-out in the center which slips over the crown and is then brought down under the chin in bridle effect.

Each of the remaining two hats work satin folds and mulline together. The one is a jockey cap type with a wee stiffened eyebrow veil. The veil with the big beauty spot of black satin is one of fashion's latest novelties.

QUILTED TAFFETA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Designers are doing many interesting things these days with quilted and stitched effects. It is not only that dresses and coats are trimmed with quilted collars, cuffs and belt, for the latest movement is for wraps which are all-over quilted. In the picture the coat which is styled with a flaring hemline and cape-sleeves according to latest fashion dictates, is made of quilted cerise taffeta. The dress is of the same taffeta minus the quilting.

Collars and Cuffs

New collars and cuffs show a fish-net effect, and another splendid idea—there is a wider assortment of collars to be had without the necessity of buying cuffs, too.

Dinner Gown

An unusual material is used for a luxurious dinner gown of white taffeta with stripes of chenille and gold lame.

HAT BRIM SMALLER; BACK IS TURNED UP

There's an epidemic of small vivid hats and scarfs to brighten up the winter scene.

Brimmed hats are still with us, but the brims are smaller and turned up in back, so as not to interfere with the sables and the silver fox.

Debutantes are going for the high-hat Cossack caps of corduroy and velvet, with matching neckerchief or Ascot, to wear with dark winter suits and coats.

They are round, Russian effects, high-crowned and brimless, that have an undeniable dash.

They come in such cheering colors as scarlet, emerald green, chartreuse, coral and old rose, and add nice accents of color to sober winter costumes.

Popular Afternoon Frock

Is of Gray Waffle Crepe

Gray waffle crepe combined with navy taffeta is used to create a very smart formal afternoon frock. The navy blue taffeta forms the high waisted bodice which has a Peter collar shirred on a cord and fastens with a small knot at the back.

The ankle-length skirt of gray waffle crepe features a slit on the left side to just below the knee. A box coat of the crepe has wide and full three-quarter sleeves lined with navy taffeta. Gray suede pumps are worn with the dress.

Shades in Spring Hosiery

Are Inspired by Cuisine

Fashion will turn to the cuisine for inspiration in the spring hosiery shades. Among the new colors will be "ice tea," "ice coffee," "egg nog," and "frappe." The first is a dark suntan, the second a medium suntan, the third a nude evening shade and the fourth a light neutral shade.

Since fabric colors will be bright for spring, hosiery tints will show a livelier quality.

Skirt Formula

Straight and narrow, slashed and slithering—this is the skirt formula for morning, afternoon and evening. Lengths vary with hours.

Precautions Called for With Perishable Food

Study of human reactions to tin have been exhaustively investigated by the food research laboratory of the bureau of soils in Washington. These studies show that no toxic action need be feared from the use of tin containers. For that reason it has been widely stated that food-stuffs need not be removed from the can after opening because of any danger from tin poisoning.

It must be apparent, on the other hand, that products like milk or canned fruits, vegetables, and meats are perishable substances. Once the can is open, they are subject to contamination from the bacteria of the air just like any fresh product. For that reason it is certainly not desirable for perishable foods to be allowed to stand in open containers any appreciable length of time unless they are kept very cold. Further, more, though cold delays the growth of these bacteria, it does not entirely prevent their growth. Hence foods cannot be kept in refrigerators in open containers indefinitely. —Dr. Walter H. Eddy, Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau.

Boat That Made History

The war vessel Monitor, built in 1861, was designed by Capt. John Ericsson, one of the inventors of the screw propeller. Its sides were protected by armor plate five inches thick and its turret by armor eight inches thick. Its queer appearance gave it the name, "the Yankee cheese box on a raft."

HAWAII SEEKS ANNEXATION

Before the adjournment of Congress, the subject of Annexation of Hawaii will be a burning issue for discussion. This little resort in mid-Pacific waters, 2100 miles southwest of San Francisco, is quite an integral part of trade, industry and commerce to United States. It enjoys its freedom as an independent commonwealth—not a colony or an over-seas possession. It is neither a dependency or a protectorate, but a full-fledged territory of the American Union, for which privilege it acted voluntarily. While it does not belong to Uncle Sam, yet it is a part of his country.

And now the little ocean haven wants annexation to United States. Hawaiian Islands were formerly the Sandwich group, consisting of eight inhabited islands spreading over 390 miles and with a total area of 6,449 square miles, inhabited by 368,336 people consisting of twelve races. Their chief occupation is sugar cane and pineapple culture, two leading manufacturing and canning industries. Hawaiian Islands are interesting ancient, as well as modern history. Capt. James Cook, a seafaring sailor, discovered the plot as early as 1778 and it first became a monarchy and was last reigned over by Queen "Lili" whose "jaw-breaker" name was Liliuokalani. She was deposed when the land became a Republic in 1898. The territorial form of government was established June 14, 1900.

Hawaii not satisfied as a territory seeks annexation as a state because she thinks she is entitled to it. Not being conquered like Arizona or New Mexico; nor was it bought and paid for, like Iowa and Kansas; nor discovered, like Oregon and Washington. Hawaii came into the American Union voluntarily; it does not belong to, but is a part of the United States.

A citizen of the Southland recently died at the extreme age of 129 years. Truly this is dying of old age. Too often we associate sixty and seventy years with decrepitude or feeble, when as it were, many are "just in their prime." Age is not a condition of years and wrinkles as much as the heart and mind. Both reflect the true age of the body. Too many are old at thirty and forty; others anywhere from sixty to eighty and some even at the age of ninety seem young and buoyant. They are mostly the optimistic and appreciative of living. He who loves life will necessarily try to take care of it. You cannot kid Mother Nature; she holds everyone to strict account. If a person has a healthy mind and body—in other words, if one is free from the destroying habits and vices that undermine the physical constitution, that person has good reasons for reaching the centennial mark, but it must be on condition that the practice of temperance be exercised in diet with plenty of good rules on health.

Uncle Sam's mints do a thriving business trying to keep us in spending money. The smaller the amount of the coin, it seems the greater the demand; that may be accounted for through the few years depression when even pennies and nickels have been hard to get. During a recent month the output of coins by the Federal mints over the United States was three times the volume of the whole year. That month was last November. Over 77,716,000 coins with a value of $4,916,820 were put into circulation. November coinage year '33 was only 2,948,000 pieces worth $480,280, while October's coinage in 1934 was 35,216,049 pieces with a value of $3,632,776. There was a constant increase when last November exceeded all preceding months. There are three mints in the United States—Washington, D. C., Denver, Colorado and San Francisco.

Everybody loves life, especially if one has that legacy of good health to his credit. Too many are looking for what Ponce de Leon failed to find; the springs of eternal youth. They seek it from every vantage ground except health. A healthy person reflects that condition in his looks, whether male or female. We do not always like to pay the price for getting health, or keeping healthy after once gained. The ones who have rounded out eighty, ninety or a hundred years, are found invariably to be in the careful-of-health class, who regard diet, habits of life and a correct mental poise or balance. Mother Nature never builds character, health, abilities or beauty on a faulty foundation. The spring of eternal youth comes at great price, but the governing rules are simple and sure.

Next Saturday is "Ground-hog Day," the eventful February 2, the point when winter is half over. This is the time when the hibernating ground-hog leaves his sleeping haunts and comes to the surface to get a look at the weather. If he sees his shadow, then "good night," he goes back to his lethargic state for another six weeks, meaning six weeks more of winter. Here in California, we look on this back east legend as a joke, for in Southern California the word hibernate is a misnomer. The groundhog never knows the meaning of winter, so February 2nd is just another day of fair weather, mostly sunshine.

Congress in Washington and the Assembly at Sacramento are assuming the role of being the busiest bodies on earth and from all signs every representative is on the job with good intentions—we hope. Emerson said, "A good intention clothes itself with power." Power is what we want and most need. By rigid rules on the floor, it seems harder for the selfish to "hog" precious time to exploit his personal ends. Conditions in government are such that time is money this year, and any waste words are to be done away with. The patriotic spirit is the clarion call in the halls of law and justice. Let men prove their metal!

California holds in deep morning, the recent death of Augustus Field Beard, who passed away on his 101st birthday. He was the oldest Yale graduate and later he met Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford, and preached the sermon at their son's funeral. He was credited with making the suggestion that they establish a university to the memory of their son; thus, Leland Stanford (jr.) University, at Palo Alto, Cal., was the result.

State and Government May Aid Exposition

Participation by the United States Government and the State of California in the California Pacific International Exposition is urged in special appropriation bills under consideration at Washington and Sacramento.

Press dispatches indicate there is little doubt both measures will be speedily passed.

Representative George Burnham introduced the bill in Congress which calls for $350,000 for a federal exhibit at the Exposition opening in San Diego May 29. This measure contemplates the erection of a special building to house the great federal exhibit.

Senator Hiram Johnson will sponsor the bill in the Senate. President Roosevelt has heartily endorsed the international exposition and hopes to attend it this summer. G. Aubrey Davidson, chairman of the Exposition board, appeared before the House Committee on Foreign Relations and outlined the scope of the imperative necessity for federal participation.

In the State Legislature, Senator Ed Fletcher is urging the Finance Committee to report favorably his bill calling for an appropriation of $200,000 for a state building and exhibit.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

Mrs. Grace Knoche will deliver the next public forum-lecture at Theosophical Headquarters, Point Loma, Sunday, February 3rd, on the subject, "What Price Civilization?" The speaker holds that civilization is of a quality depending upon the price paid for it, and that price may be selfish and material or paid in the coin of the spirit. In spite of the pessimism induced by the world-situation at present, with three-fourths of the entire population living in the poverty line, the speaker holds that there is every warrant for an optimistic view because the remedy is so simple and so near at hand. She holds that below the causes usually credited with producing the unsatisfactory thing we now call 'civilization' lie other and deeper causes that are being overlooked, and these will be discussed in the Sunday lecture. Mrs. Knoche is international head of the children's department of the Theosophical society, with branch headquarters of children's work already in sixteen countries.

PROTECT VARNISH

Dust or dirt should never be rubbed off a varnished surface, as gritty particles may scratch the finish. A varnished finish is best cleaned by dusting with a soft wool cloth or washing with cold water.

Rev. W. S. Dunn will be the speaker in the morning hour of worship at 11 o'clock. His sermon subject will be "Receiving Christ". The Lord's Supper will be observed during this service.

The Young People's society meets at 6:45 p. m. A missionary from the Congo will present a message of interest.

The pastor will speak on the question "Does Jesus Care?" at the 7:30 p. m. services.

You will receive a cordial welcome at these services.

Lutheran Mission

"The Vehement Way In Which Jesus Showed Forth His Glory On The Sea of Galilee" will be the subject of the sermon Sunday, at the 10:45 o'clock service. The divine love and the divine power of Jesus our Savior, will be brought out. These facts give great comfort to every Christian. Come and receive some of this comfort for yourself.

The Sunday school lesson for this Sunday will be: "The Centurion of Capernaum." That Jesus healed the centurion's servant by His Word and that Faith is necessary to obtain Christ's help and eternal salvation will be the thoughts brought out in the various departments. Bring the children closer to Jesus. This is what He wants.

A very cordial invitation is extended to all to attend these services held at the Woman's club house.

Point Loma High Commencement.

Thursday evening, January 31, 1935, last night, the class of January, 1935, were presented their diplomas in the auditorium of Point Loma high school. The ceremony was a most impressive one and was marked by speeches from members of the class as well as an address by Dr. Charles R. Tupper, assistant superintendent of schools.

The program opened with the playing of the traditional Pomp and Circumstance by Elgar, by the Point Loma high school orchestra. Following the pledge of allegiance, which was led by Blanche Price, class president, the invocation was given by Rev. W. S. Dunn. "Friendly Neighbors," the valedictory address by Blanche Price was followed by three selections by the combined glee clubs of Point Loma high school under the direction of Myron B. Green. Next came a very interesting talk by Martha Dahk, a young lady who has been blind since early childhood, but who has not let this become too great a handicap. Her topic was, "It Can Be Done", which was very well delivered. The orchestra then played March Slav by Tschai-kowsky, after which Dr. Charles R. Tupper gave the address of the evening. Following the presentation of the class and awards by Principal Clarence R. Swenson, the diplomas were presented to the members of the graduating class by Orton Darnall, a member of the board of education.

The exercises were concluded with the singing of the graduation song by the members of the graduating class and with the playing of a march by the orchestra. Congratulations were being offered the graduates by their friends and relatives who made up the capacity audience.

And so another very busy semester was brought to a close and became memories in the minds of those graduating as well as those who attended the ceremony.

Our Weekly Bible Lesson.

(From The Sermon on the Mount—The Book of Matthew.)
THE EVILS OF ANGER
(Matthew 5. 21-26)

21. Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment: 22. But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire. 23. Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath against thee, 24. Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift. 25. Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. 26. Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

WARREN WALKER SCHOOL Go To Church Sunday

Every afternoon in the Warren Walker school we learn to sing. Miss McIntyre teaches us the songs. We have learned to sing Old Folks at Home, My Old Kentucky Home and Old Black Joe. They were all written by Stephen Foster. Miss Newlon suggested that we learn about Stephen Foster.

We have been making a garden. Last Friday we worked all afternoon. We are going to plant vegetables on the south side and flowers on the north side.

MANY MOTORISTS RUN RISKS ON LICENSES

More than 350,000 motorists in California are driving cars without having operators' licenses as required by law, or with licenses that have expired, according to a report from the Motor Vehicle department.

With the exception of those licenses issued between January 1, 1927, up to and including August 13, 1929, which have not been revoked, operators' cards in this state are good for only two years. If they are not renewed after that period, the persons holding them have no legal right to drive and are subject to arrest.

It is suggested by the Automobile club of Southern California that motorists whose operators' licenses have expired take advantage of the opportunity to renew them when applying for their 1935 auto license plates.

Licenses may be renewed at offices of the department of motor vehicles, at automobile club headquarters for members and out-of-state motorists, or other authorized agencies.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." These words from I John are the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "Love" on Sunday in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

A Bible selection in the Lesson-Sermon includes these words from the epistle to the Hebrews: "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." Among the correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, are the statements: "Passions, selfishness, false appetites, hatred, fear, all sensually yield to spirituality, and the superabundance of being is on the side of God, good. . . . The way to extract error from mortal mind is to pour in truth through flood tides of Love."

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the little lumbering town of Tincup, accompanied by Don Stuart, a very sick man, whom he has befriended.

CHAPTER I—Continued

Thought of the rules swept the crowd, because Duval was edging to the right. He moved slowly, awkwardly, at the cost of great effort, on toward the center of the log. Was he trying one more trick? Not likely. A man under such a strain does not attempt strategy . . . not fair strategy. As he progressed an inch at a time Elliott countered by also creeping toward the center so his end might not dip beneath the surface.

Both men had their arms extended and Elliott's grin had faded to a sort of curious smile, a speculative alertness. . . . Close and closer they came together and then, as their extended hands were all but touching, Duval suddenly flicked his right wrist in a pass at Elliott's left hand.

"Ah, th' dirty—" But Bird-Eye's high scream was cut short by an ominous roar. The Bull, facing defeat, had overstepped all rules. The slightest touch on the other's body would upset his balance, now, and after Elliott had proven himself above taking what was even recognized as a fair advantage, the last vestige of loyalty to town or whatever it was which had put men on Duval's side was whisked away.

On Duval's face was ruthlessness along with the flush of fatigue and humiliation. He would be the last man on that log, though disqualified for any prize. At any cost he would stay on that log.

But would he? Elliott, a steely quality coming into his grin, retreated until he was out of the other's reach. The log sank beneath him but he did not slow his cadence despite the fact that he ran in water. He loosed the last reservoir of his energy and by the way his feet flickered and clawed and spurred that log one might well have believed that until now he had only played with this crowned king of the river that flowed past Tincup.

Watchers felt their middles aching as they followed those straining contestants. Again the Bull sought to strike Elliott's extended hand and missed by inches. His left hand raised jerkily, up and up. His body tilted. His great torso was twisting, wrenching at the hips, and, seeing this, Elliott leaped high, came down running, sent water sloshing back and forth the length of the stick until with a throaty cry of rage and humiliation, of hatred and jealousy, the great Bull, missing a stride, went sideways and backward, disappeared beneath the surface of the pond with a mighty splash and came up blowing and shaking his black-thatched head.

Hats went into the air, then, along with yips and yells and enthusiastic oaths as Ben Elliott, panting heavily, brought the log to a stop and, hands on his knees, stood blowing and grinning and watched the man whose title he had taken swim for the pool sticks.

The Bull slunk quickly toward the boiler room of the mill, water streaming from his paits and sleeves. The pond man threw out his pike pole and brought the cedar log to shore and there Birney, the announcer and master of ceremonies, greeted Elliott with a clap on the back and, with the other hand, thrust a roll of currency at him.

"Here's your money and you sure deserve it," he cried, close in Ben's ear to make himself heard. "You'd got it on a foul, anyhow. Better this way!"

Bird-Eye grasped his hand and shook it with congratulations as profane as they were shrill. Others surged around the victor and Elliott accepted this homage modestly.

"Luck!" he said to one enthusiastic well-wisher. "I got the breaks in luck." "Luck be damned!" shrilled Bird-Eye. "I'll lick any man who says 'twas luck! You got stuff, me by; you got guts!"

"Thanks, chum!" Elliott laughed. "I hope you don't find me like!"

He shouldered his way slowly to his pack-sack and, surrounded by his admirers, with Bird-Eye in the fore, changed to his shoes again. He had the usual run of questions to answer that is the lot of any winner in a spectacular contest and he did it with that amiable grin, with his marked modesty and yet with a likeable frankness.

He looked about for Don Stuart, craning his neck to see over the crowd which was now moving up toward Tincup's main thoroughfare.

"Who ye mean?" Bird-Eye asked. "Owld Donny?"

"Yeah. Stuart. The old duffer's broke, on top of being sick, and I want to look out for him."

A man at his elbow said cautiously: "I'm afereed old Don won't do much visitin' in Tincup." Bird-Eye turned to him inquiringly and the man nodded. "Brandon. He found him here while th' birlin' was goin' on. He's likely made other arrangements."

Bird-Eye's face reflected concern;

the other man's a cynical acceptance of some unpleasant fact.

"Th' dirty stinker!" Bird-Eye said beneath his breath. "So he's drivin' him out already, is he? Well, th' low down—"

"Who's driving who out?" Elliott asked. "Misther Brandon. Americky moight be a free country but Tincup ain't in it, thin. Owld Donny ain't welcome here 'nd 't's likely he's got his orders to move on."

Elliott hitched his pack-sack higher. "What's this? Orders? What's wrong with him? Seemed like a harmless old gaffer to me. Bent on coming to Tincup, too; wanted it like a little kid wants candy. Got my goat. . . . Who's going to run him off?"

Bird-Eye had hopped nimbly to a log from which point he could see across bobbing heads.

"Ah-ha!" he exclaimed. "Sure, it's Misther Brandon hisself who's a-runnin' owld Donny off!"

Elliott craned his neck and could see, half-way to the depot, two men on the sidewalk. One was his companion in travel earlier that day; the other a man he had not seen before. The latter had Don Stuart by one arm but that contact was not the friendly assistance which Ben had offered the old fellow. As Elliott looked, the feeble old man tried to draw away but the other was insistent, scarcely hesitated in his progress toward the station.

"Train west's due now," Bird-Eye said. "Sure, 'nd pore owld Donny, he'll be a passenger. It's a cryin' shame, kapin' him away from Tincup so!"

Elliott started forward, Bird-Eye at his heels, crossing the street, leaping to the high board sidewalk and swinging on.

He overtook the two he followed just in time to hear Stuart gasp:

"—ain't long to . . . live, Nick. I'd like . . . stay here. . . . Ain't pleasant to . . . be sick and not . . . among friends."

"Never mind," the other said as one might to a protesting child. "I've told you any number of times to stay away."

On this reply Elliott moved abreast of the man.

"Hello, old timer!" he said, addressing Stuart. "Going some place?"

He did not look at the man said to be Nicholas Brandon. His manner on the question was almost casual.

"Oh . . . hello," Don panted. "I . . . Mister Brandon, here . . . won't let me . . . stay."

Then Elliott looked at Brandon. A man of indeterminate age; not old, neither young. Powerfully built, with a peculiarly white face and eyes as black as night. Those eyes bored into Elliott's now, keenly, intelligently, with the look of a man who is accustomed to gauging others without delay or hesitation; they were the eyes of a man who knows men, the glance of one accustomed to rule men.

"Oh, this man doesn't want you to stay!" Ben said softly. And then with a smile, to Brandon: "I sort of took the old timer under my wing today. He wants to stay here quite badly. I'll look after him."

"There's no place for him here," Brandon said positively. "Come, Stuart, it's almost train time."

He twitched at the old man's arm but Ben broke in, brow wrinkled as if he wanted to handle a perplexing matter fairly.

"Well, now, say! No place? Suppose a place was made for him a few days? I'd sort of planned on that. There's a hotel here, and I'd be willing to—"

"I don't know you," Brandon interrupted and irritability crept into his voice. "I've never even seen you. I've known this man for years. He's an old employee of mine. This is my affair. I never have others, especially strangers, meddling."

A low whimper came from Stuart and Ben rubbed his chin with one knuckle.

"Yeah. I am butting in, I guess. But . . . You see, the old timer told me a little about himself. He's been lonesome a long time, I take it. He's not what you'd call in robust health. I figure that if I was in his shape, I'd like to be with a few old friends myself and if—"

In the distance a train whistled and on the sound Brandon's eyes snapped.

"I've not time to argue my affairs," he said sharply. "Come, Stuart."

"But, Nick! See . . . here, Nick. . . . I'll never get back . . . again. It's lonesome, bein' sick . . . alone, where you can't . . . Nick! You're . . . hurting my wrist!"

He winced from the grasp and on that the last shadow of smile went out of Ben Elliott's face, the slightly apologetic look at interfering in a matter which was not strictly his affair passed from his eyes. He put himself squarely before Brandon.

"Let him go," he said quietly, but his look drove hard into those black eyes. The man hesitated and flushed.

"If you aren't looking for trouble," he said, voice edged with wrath, "you'll keep out of this!"

"Fair enough. But unless you've got a better reason than I know about, let the old timer alone! Let go his wrist!"

he added sharply, as Stuart winced again.

"I'll thank you to keep out of—"

"Let—go—his—wrist, you d—d bully!"

He had grasped Brandon's forearm with both hands, letting his pack slip to the sidewalk. The clutch on Don Stuart's arm loosened. With a snarl Brandon drew back and swung for Ben's jaw. Elliott ducked, swayed forward and bending his supple body caught Brandon about the middle, drove his head into the man's chest, raised a knee to his groin, lifted him from his feet, swung, shoved and flung him free.

With a sharp oath Brandon went down in the half-thawed mire of the street, sprawling ignominiously on his back.

Well, now! This was something else again. Men had been coming, edging cautiously near during the brief argument between Elliott and Nicholas Brandon. But when Brandon, the man who ruled Tincup and its county, was seen lifted from his feet and tossed ignominiously into the mud, trampled by his horses, stirred by the wheels of his wagons and tractors, the street which led through his town, to his mill. . . . Well, then they came a-running!

Bird-Eye cackled an impudent laugh and turned to watch the faces of the vanguard who came to see their liege lord, sprawled in the mud there, scrambling.

With A Sharp Oath Brandon Went Down Into the Half-Thawed Mire of the Street.

ble to his feet. Their voices were raised in incredulity. In two decades and more no man save Bird-Eye Blaine had dared lift even his voice in Tincup in other than respect for Nicholas Brandon. And now this stranger had picked him up and thrown him away!

But Brandon was up, lurching for the sidewalk where Ben Elliott stood, legs spread, fists clenched but with good humor repossessed and grinning as he had grinned at Bull Duval; grinning as a man will who loves combat for its own sake and not at all as one who fights in red rage.

However his smile faded and his jaw settled as Brandon uplifted his face in that rash. Murder was there, in the black eyes, in the loose hanging of the lower lip, in the purple flush of his cheeks. Murder, and no less. As quickly as that homicidal look had come, it passed. Something like fear swept those eyes, driving it away. Not fear of this encounter, Ben knew; not fear of a stronger, younger man. Something else again; something entirely different. It was the sort of fear that comes from within; the kind of fear a man has for his own impulses.

Brandon halted abruptly. His fists relaxed into hands and with one of them he brushed rather aimlessly at mud on his sleeve.

A dozen men were close, then, holding back, watching, waiting, listening. Others were coming; many more, pounding over the walk, splashing through melting puddles, keyed to grand excitement. And as Brandon halted, looking up into Elliott's face and evidently fighting for self-control, one of these new arrivals pushed to the front and came up importantly.

"What's the matter, Mr. Brandon?" he asked sharply, with the manner of one ready to render service.

Brandon did not reply at once. He settled his coat on his shoulders. "Sheriff, arrest this young man immediately," he said then. "I'll swear to a complaint of assault and battery myself."

A sigh of relief, of disappointment, of laxing tension, or of all these combined, went up from the growing group. The sheriff turned to Elliott and touched his arm significantly.

"You'd better come along, Elliott," he said. "You took in too much territory."

Ben looked about almost foolishly. He was embarrassed and surprised. He had expected a rough-and-tumble fight in what he considered a righteous cause and surely he was the sort who would have been on familiar ground in such an encounter. But here he was, with a sheriff plucking at his sleeve! He laughed a bit sheepishly.

"All right, Sheriff. If it's arresting you run to here in Tincup, likely I'm it!"

He turned for his pack-sack and as he did so observed old Don Stuart sitting weakly on the step of the vacant store building before which the scene had been enacted. Perspiration beaded his waxen face and his quick breath came through open, colorless lips. He was obviously a sick man and trouble clouded Elliott's eyes.

"Minute, Sheriff," he said and crossed to Don, thrusting one hand into a pants pocket.

"Here, old timer," he said gently. The hand came out and into Stuart's palm he pressed a thin packet of bills and some change. "Get one of your old buddies . . . Here you!"—straightening and beckoning Bird-Eye, who approached with alacrity. "Get the old timer to a hotel. Better get a doctor, too. He's heeled enough to take care of himself a few days. After that . . . we'll see."

He turned then and fastened a severe gaze on Brandon.

"And you, chum, let him alone!" he warned. "Until a doctor says he can travel, you watch your step with him!"

But Brandon ignored this. He was buttoning his coat, pushing his way through the group, which fell aside respectfully.

"All right, Sheriff," said Ben to that worthy. "Let's go!"

CHAPTER II

Able Armitage, Justice of the peace in Tincup, looked over his spectacles into the face of the prisoner before him and a twinkle appeared in his keen blue eyes. He asked:

"Now, young man, you're charged with assault and battery on the person of Nicholas Brandon. Are you guilty?"

From the rear windows of his cluttered little office, Able had watched young Ben Elliott emerge from the status of a complete stranger to the populace to that of its latest hero by sending Mr. Bull Duval to a damp and ignominious finish in the log birling. After that he picked up an old clarinet and commenced to play a halting, aimless and not completely musical tune.

He was so occupied either with the musical performance or with his thoughts that he did not hear the tramp of many feet on the walk outside and was unaware that he was about to be called on to function in an official capacity. When the door opened, though, and Ben Elliott, Hickens, the sheriff, and Nicholas Brandon, followed, it seemed, by the total male population of the county, surged through the doorway the clarinet's squawking leaped into a shrill squeal and died away. The judge's feet dropped to the floor and he swung his chair to face the entrance.

The sheriff stated his errand, the complaint was drawn, Nicholas Brandon affixed his signature and then for the first time Able looked closely into the face of the defendant.

It was a long and searching look and was met steadily by a pair of clear, steel-gray eyes which seemed, on careful inspection, to be struggling to hold back an expression that might, if permitted to develop, have proved to be a mischievous smile.

Origin of English Toy

Spaniel Much Disputed

Retrouse nose, abundant coat and highly intelligent expression—those are the chief characteristics of the English Toy Spaniel, observes an authority in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There are four classes of English Toy Spaniels—King Charles, Blenheim, Ruby and Prince Charles. King Charles have a black and tan coat, Blenheim have a red and white coat, Ruby a solid red and Prince Charles a tricolor coat.

Under an American Kennel club ruling in 1902, English Toy Spaniels were classed together in a general group. Another standard for the breed was adopted by the Toy Spaniel Club of America in 1909.

The origin of the Toy Spaniel is so much disputed that Pug, Maltese, Pekingese, Jap and even the Bulldog have been credited with a share in its ancestry. A cross probably was used to obtain the present short-faced specimen.

Toy Spaniels date back to the Sixteenth century. They were in high favor before the restoration of the House of Stuart in England.

Since the days of King Charles, whose name they bear, they have been closely associated with royalty. They reached the zenith of their popularity during the reign of James II, who bred them extensively.

Sensitiveness to Sound

Tests of human sensitiveness to sound show that when a paper bag is exploded near a man's ear, the pressure on his brain increases fourfold, while the rhythmic working of his stomach muscles is slowed down by a third.

WHOOPIING COUGH

Anyone who has seen a child go through the strangling, vomiting phase of whooping cough, certainly wishes that whooping cough might be wiped off the face of the earth.

Whooping cough is a major infectious disease. It causes 10,000 or more deaths yearly in this country. In the seven years ending in 1931, there were approximately 2,000 deaths from whooping cough in the state of Illinois, or an average of about 285 a year. During 1931 and part of 1932, 19,000 cases were reported to the Illinois health department by physicians of the state.

Ninety per cent of the deaths occur in children under three years of age. The largest number of deaths occur in the second half of the first year.

Girls are more susceptible to whooping cough than boys are. It is the only communicable disease of childhood in which there is this sex distinction.

Death rates are higher in the rural districts than in the cities, and the disease is more severe in colder climates than in the warm zones.

While few deaths occur past six years of age, anyone may get whooping cough. Parents, if they have not had it before, sometimes get it from their children. But when one has had a case of this disease, one is usually immune to a second attack.

So far as is known, monkeys are the only animals besides man that can contract whooping cough. This is one reason why it has been difficult for bacteriologists to experiment with this disease, as monkeys are scarce and expensive. Indeed, the papers reported recently the plight of a Cleveland doctor who is trying to find the cause of the distinctive whoop. He had secured four chimpanzees at a cost of $350 each. He gave the disease to two of the animals, but kept the other two isolated for a later experiment. But in some way these two also got it, and he is unable to give any one of the four a second attack. So he has to get a new lot of chimpanzees before he can continue his work.

Whooping cough is transmitted from person to person in secretions of the mouth and nose, and by kissing and close contact. It is not contagious during the period of incubation, which is from two to three weeks—usually fourteen to sixteen days, but it can be transmitted from the appearance of the first symptom, and it is most contagious during the early stage before the whoop develops. It may also be communicated in the late stages and for some time after convalescence.

We have not discovered any vaccine for it yet, either for its prevention or its cure, as we have for diphtheria. But in 1906 two Belgian scientists, Gengou and the famous Bordet, discovered the bacteria that cause whooping cough. These bacteria live far down in the bronchial tubes, however, and for a number of years doctors tried out various methods of raising the bacteria to the surface, but with many patients they were not successful in doing so. Then ten years later, two German scientists, Chliewitz and Meyer, invented a cough plate, which was perfected by a Danish scientist, Madsen. This is a shallow tin box, with a cover. The size of the palm of the hand, in which a special media is put. The pan is held before the mouth of the coughing child. Then the cover is put on and the box sent to a laboratory to find out if the whooping cough germ is present.

The reason it is advisable to have this test made is because some nervous children develop a cough that resembles whooping cough, and yet isn't, and it would be a hardship to isolate them from other children. And in the first stages of whooping cough, the cough does not differ so much from the cough of a severe bronchial cold.

The point is that if a child has become exposed to whooping cough, and then develops a cold, that child should be suspected of having something more than a cold that will yield to home remedies. A physician should be called at once and the culture made. If the culture is positive, then the child should be kept away from other children, particularly babies.

There is a strong ray of hope, though, in the whooping cough situation. Several doctors here and abroad, who are devoting much time to whooping cough, have made very promising progress in their development of a vaccine for its prevention and a serum for its cure.

They have been quite successful in their treatment of a number of patients. But their treatment has not quite reached the stage where it can have the universal application that the diphtheria vaccines have.

When a child has whooping cough, the state laws should be strictly followed. Some states now permit convalescent children to play out of doors before the quarantine is lifted, if they wear a wide band around the arm, with the words "whooping cough" on it. Children who have had whooping cough are especially susceptible to tuberculosis for some time after their recovery.

TRIM SLIP HAS SPECIAL POINTS

PATTERN 2053

Even under the sheerest frock this slip should prove sufficient unto itself, for it's designed with two full, back skirts so as to be absolutely shadow-proof. The shoulder straps are cut in one piece with the bodice to prevent them from slipping at the shoulders. The darts under the arms give comfortable fullness over the bust. And with the skirt opening from below the hips to the hem at the back there should be no split seams to trouble you after a few weeks' wear. It's a lovely design for satin or heavy crepe, and if you would like something a little more feminine, why not add lace edging at the hem and the neckline?

Pattern 2053 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48. Size 34 takes 3½ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

SOLE SUPPORT

A shiftless specimen of humanity came along the street one morning, and joining a group at the corner announced that he was going to leave town—said he could not live in it any longer.

Some one asked him what was the matter.

"Well," he said, "the town is all right; but it's the hardest place in the world for a woman to get work in!"—Buen Humor.

Few Cases of Arthritis

Can Be Left to Nature

Correction of living habits, proper diet and removal of foci of infection do not always result in disappearance of pain or other symptoms in joints in cases of arthritis, according to Dr. Maurice F. Lautman, who writes on "Preventing Arthritis" in Hygeia Magazine.

"Perhaps one of the greatest difficulties encountered in successfully preventing disease is the human tendency to gamble with health," the author says. "Too much reliance is placed on the hope that nature, if not interfered with, will take care of everything. This belief as far as arthritis is concerned is, unfortunately, frequently disastrous. It is quite true that the individual who is threatened with arthritis has his work cut out for him. The task of preventing arthritis is not an easy one, to be sure, but one has only to contemplate the countless persons who are disabled or hopelessly crippled to realize that as far as arthritis is concerned, the ounce of prevention will be worth tons and tons of cure."

Artificial Chlorophyll

Within a year scientists expect to be able artificially to create chlorophyll, the substance used by plants for transforming solar into chemical energy. Dr. Paul Rothenmund, research fellow of Kettering Foundation of Antioch college, recently reported to the Academy of Sciences that synthetic production of this substance, the basis of plant life, appears to be only a matter of months.

Towns Have Many Autos

It has been found that it is in small towns of 1,000 to 5,000 people that the largest number of cars is owned in proportion to the population. The percentage is least in towns of 50,000 to 100,000.

Entomologists Tell Us

Things About Mosquito

Fishermen have long known when fish bite best. Now the periods when mosquitoes bite best, or worst, have been revealed by entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

There are mosquitoes that bite only at night, others that bite only during the day, some bite best at sunrise and some best at sundown.

There is one grain of comfort for the mosquito-ridden citizen. Only the female mosquito bites. The male feeds on nectar and similar substances.

Here are some mosquito "schedules":

The "rain barrel" or common mosquito bites only at night and can find her victims no matter how dark it is. When flying it makes that irritating singing noise which is familiar to every one.

The yellow fever mosquito usually bites close to the ground or attacks from behind, and often crawls under clothing to bite. It bites only in the daytime and is busiest early in the morning and late in the afternoon. It flies quietly. It will bite indoors all day.

The fresh-water marsh mosquito known under the scientific name Mansonia, a severe biter, is busiest just at dusk. It spends the day in the grass and will bite during the day if disturbed.

Malarial mosquitoes will bite all night long and sometimes, too, in the daytime, especially on dark days.
